In the lull that precedes the Chicago cyclone, the only prominent republican politician who is not mentioned as a possible candidate is Roscoe Conkling. That he is as able a statesman as any, is conceded. That he is honest in politics and business, is known. That the old guard of 306 would hail him as a leader is certain. That he would be the second choice of the followers of Logan and Grant is extremely probable. That the supporters of Arthur could not feel aggrieved at the nomination of the man who made Arthur is true. That he is not a presidential candidate, openly or secretly, is admitted. It would seem, to a man up a tree, that if the nomination at Chicago is not determined upon the first or second ballots, and Conkling has one friend in the convention who can express himself intelligibly, the son of old Judge Conkling will prove a "mighty peart" dark horse.

A LADY correspondent of Milo, Me., sends a contribution on the subject of intemperance. We do not think a reiteration of the "midnight lamp," "coiled serpent," "first step that leads to ruin" business has very much weight. The unadorned tale of the pauper and convict, told every day in the public journals, the narrative of the suffering of the wife or mother of a sot, the remembrance of a child of a rum ruined home, the disgusting exhibition of the whisky idiot himself, is more powerful. This first glass bugbear is the worst thing that was ever published. The statement that if a young man takes a glass of liquor he is ruined (if the young man believes it himself) is sure death. This wonderfully powerful decoction of serpent arouses the curiosity of youth, and he samples it as Adam did the apple. Having been early impressed with the idea that this bite of the serpent is fatal and that none but the exceptionally strong can hope to survive it, the youth goes cheerfully galloping along the high road to destruction. The New England temperance worker seems to respect liquor too much. Raise your husbands, sons and fathers above it rather than set them in hostility against it, and we believe more good will be done.

THE CENTURY for June is at hand and is especially strong in its editorial department. "Reaping the Whirlwind" ought to be copied in the journals of every large city. It is a sequel to the April article, "Mob and Magistrate," which anticipated the Cincinnati riot. Mr. Cable's novel, "Dr. Sevier," which deserves a celebrity greater than that of the "Bread Winners," is continued, and Robert Grant's average novel of "An Average Man," is brought to an end.

We have received the first copy of the Bismarck Weekly Journal, the new paper of Col. C. A. Lounsberry. It is a five column quarto, filled with able editorials and interesting news. The Strait land bill, reducing the price of government land, and the Raymond bill affecting homesteads, with many other matters of peculiar interest to Dakota, are discussed. A correspondent furnishes an absorbing account of the troubled political career of Wm. Pitt Kellogg.

The Sargent County Item says Gen. Swaim must have been a victim to the "allurements of the seductive jack-pot—whatever that is." We don't suppose there is a newspaper in the territory that can open the subject and shed any light on it.

The Clerk of the Court.

The organic law of the territory provides that each of our judges shall appoint one person as clerk of the district over which he presides, and shall designate and retain but one such clerk where more than one is already appointed; and only such district clerk shall receive pay from the United States.

The session laws of 1883 provide that the clerkship of the district court shall be an elective office.

The question naturally arises, shall we proceed to elect our clerks at the coming November election, or regard the act of the legislature as in conflict with the organic law, and therefore void. This latter view seems to be the correct one. Perhaps some of our legislators will reconcile the statute with the organic act.
