

CUBAN WOMEN.

Languid Beauties Whose Only Exercise Is to Fan Themselves.

Every Cuban city resolves itself into a beauty show every afternoon, says a Havana correspondent. When the hot sun's rays slant so as to fill the streets with shade, the pretty girls, dressed in their thin, light costumes, pose themselves in picturesque attitudes in the windows, and enjoy looking out on the street scenes, and being looked at in return. The windows are as big as stable doors, and the sills, which are as wide as an ordinary sofa, and composed of cool marble squares or china tiles, are only a foot, or, at the most, two feet above the sidewalk. On these broad sills the pretty, big-orbed, languid beauties seat themselves in tailor fashion, or lie at half length, resting their backs against the window frames and displaying their small high-arched heeled shoes, and sometimes an inch of gay silk hose. I never saw one reading in fact, I never saw anybody reading in Cuba. Every club has a library, but the collections of volumes are very slender, and seem to be usually dusty and abandoned looking. The women and girls sometimes hum a pretty Cuban tune, sometimes chat or comment on the passers-by, but oftener are content to lie in dreamy indolence, fanning themselves with the easy, graceful mastery of their huge fans peculiar to Spanish and semi-Spanish women.

They lack vivacity. They are inactive. I saw every sort of them, and the only one who in my presence exhibited energy enough to run from a mouse was a ballet dancer in a theatre. In a parlor in Santiago six or eight were entertaining company. The night was cool, as all nights are in that land of promise, and a company of healthy American girls would have shown at their best. Some would have romped, some would have laughed outright at the mental efforts of others; not so the Cuban misses. Each girl came languidly in, dropped into a rocking-chair, opened a huge fan, and took a light part in a very light conversation. To be sure, they were proportionately as active in comparison with the men as American women are, for the heat saps energy to such a degree that one never sees a man hurry, or allowed himself to be disturbed by work. A few hours of coolness in the evenings will not suffice to overthrow the results of every day heat. On board the Ward's steamer Newport, coming from Havana early in May, when the ocean atmosphere was refreshingly cool, a number of New York men endeavored to arouse the ladies, all Cubans or Spaniards, but they would not walk or dance or even talk very much. The most that could be coaxed from them was an occasional Spanish or Creole ballad, sung so sweetly and with such unlooked for spirit every time and by every lady, that all the passengers crowded the social hall, and even struggled for room in the gallery overhead.

Wallace and the Turkish Siren. "Where is the lovely Turkish maiden which the Sultan presented to you," was asked recently of a large, handsome, olive-complexioned man who stood in the rotunda of one of the leading hotels in Washington. The question, being a somewhat singular one, attracted the attention of several gentlemen in the vicinity. The questioner was a reporter, and the gentleman addressed was Hon. Lew Wallace, of Indiana, the present United States Minister to Turkey. Wallace's name is more frequently in the newspapers probably than any man in the public service abroad. The explanation of this is that Wallace is one of the few foreign ministers who earn their salary by hard work in matters affecting the interest of citizens of the United States. He is a warm personal friend of the Sultan of Turkey. He gives that nabob the benefit of his advice in conducting the affairs of the Empire. In other words Wallace and his Royal Highness are "chums." Hence the story of "The Lovely Turkish Maiden." As told by Wallace, it was quite interesting. It seems that while discussing a bottle of Turkish wine at the Sultan's palace one day, the gallant Wallace admired the picture of a beautiful sun-browned siren hanging on the wall. "You shall have it!" impulsively cried his Majesty. "Oh no!" said the diplomat. "My country will not allow her representatives to accept gifts from foreign potentates.

"Then I shall loan you the charming beauty," was the prompt reply. When Wallace arrived home he found four sturdy natives bearing the gentle maiden on their broad shoulders and he gave her a corner in his tasteful residence. His wife hearing that her spouse had been presented with a girl of surpassing charms, hastened home with fire in her eye only to find that it was but a picture. Then some enterprising newspaper published the story and clothed the fair being with flesh and blood. Since then Wallace has been besieged with letters and telegrams in reference to his harem. He says one object of his visit to this country now is to explode the rumor that he had accepted as a gift a fair daughter of the Sun. Wallace's life in Turkey must be a pleasant one. The doors of the Sultan's palace are always open to him. The United States has pleasant relations with that country. The skies are clear. The air is pure. Living is cheap. His salary is ample and the women are beautiful. Who wouldn't go there?

Two young men attending the military academy eloped with two young seminary girls some time ago, and were married by a justice of the peace at Rochelle, N. Y. The young ladies are said to be Lydia and Mary Wills, daughters of a wealthy paper manufacturer, now deceased, and are quite wealthy. The young men are Frederick M. McNally of Detroit and Henry G. Wallings of Chicago. They are mere boys, neither being of age. The young ladies are about the same age as the boys. The girls say they only married for fun. An effort is to be made in the courts to annul.

The president has made the following special rules for the regulation and improvement of the civil service: First—The names of all persons who shall have successfully passed their examination under the civil service act previous to July 18, 1884, may remain on the register. Persons are eligible for appointment two years from the date of their respective registrations unless sooner appointed. Second—The appointments to 150 places in the pension offices provided to be filled by the act of July 7, 1884, except so far as may be filled by promotion, must be separately apportioned by the appointing power, as nearly in conformity with the second section of the act of Jan. 16, 1883 as the need of filling them promptly and the residence of applicants will permit.

Agonizing Pain. I suffered pain and torture for forty-eight hours with pain and soreness all through my back and chest. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil relieved and cured me.

Mrs. E. SYKES, 80 Chestnut St. Springfield, Ohio. For three years I suffered with a pain in my chest and side which over a dozen skillful doctors failed to remedy. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil has made me a well man.

G. G. PARKER, Ashley, Luzerne, Pa. GEORGE H. DART, Sas City, Iowa. ED. S. ROWLEY, Davenport, Iowa. VICTOR A. LOTTER, Danville, Pa. The above gentlemen state Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil cured them of catarrh. In fact it is almost infallible for catarrh—has cured thousands—and with deafness the following is truly wonderful:

Buffalo, N. Y., Apr. 12, 1884. For twenty years I was so hard of hearing, people considered it hard work to talk to me. I tried all the cures advertised—and ear doctors—and my case was finally pronounced incurable. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil was recommended—I used it three times (by dropping in the ears) and not over a tablespoonful altogether. It cured me, and so thoroughly, I can now hear as well as any one; also used it for catarrh with immediate relief.

Thirty deaths from cholera at Marselles in one night, and twenty-eight deaths at Toulon. A panic was created at Toulon Monday night by the arrival of one hundred coffins ordered from Marselles. In order to allay the excitement it was found necessary to send the coffins back. At a meeting of the municipal council of Paris, the director of public aid declared that no case of genuine Asiatic or sporadic cholera had been reported at the Paris hospitals, and deaths attributed to cholera are really due to other causes. Between 9 and noon Tuesday there were eight deaths from cholera at Marselles.

Affairs in Ireland have been portentous of late. There is now some fear on the part of Chief Secretary Trevelyan and others of a dangerous agitation next fall against the system of rents rated by the local judiciary. The rulings of the magistrates have been generally moderate and considerate, and the order from the Irish office has been that they should lean to the tenant rather than to the landlord, so as to prevent a general depreciation in values in Irish farming lands. It is claimed, however, that the magisterial judgment is often warped by local and social influences, and that it is not at all judicial. Some of the charges imposed are said to be on the rack rent principle, and it is feared that a dangerous agitation will begin when the wants of winter begin to punish the people.

A Cincinnati Druggist Reports. Mr. Ferd Zuenkeler, Druggist, No. 686 Vine St., Cincinnati, O., writes under date April 7th, 1884, I have obtained four additional verbal testimonials for "The Big Four" Peerless Papillon Remedies, from my customers. Mr. Louis Grater says, "Papillon Blood Cure works like a charm." Geo. C. Hasenfeld, of Bethlehem suburb, says: "Papillon Blood Cure is a great relief to him, and is glad that he has at last found something that will do him good." Miss C. E. Relschark, No. 302 McMillen Avenue, praises Papillon Skin Cure very highly. She has used three bottles. Mr. Adam Kiefer, cor. 3rd and Martin Sts., has used two bottles of Papillon Catarrh Cure, and says, "the positive it will cure him if he keeps it up," which he says, "I will do." Mr. Reule, of whom I wrote in my last letter, said to me this evening that your "Papillon Catarrh Cure is a good remedy, because he has given it a fair trial and has obtained most excellent results therefrom."

PAIN!

Pain is supposed to be the lot of us poor mortals, as inevitable as death, and liable at any time to come upon us. Therefore it is important that remedial agents should be at hand to be used in an emergency, when we are made to feel the excruciating agonies of pain or the depressing influence of disease. Such a remedial agent exists in that old reliable Family Remedy,

PERRY DAVIS' Pain-Killer

It was the first and is the Only Permanent Pain Reliever.
