

Secretary McPherson on Hendricks' War Record.

He voted against every tax bill to raise money to carry on the war. He was in the senate when the tariff act of 1864 was passed, and he was one of the five democrats in the senate when the internal revenue act of 1864 was passed, and he was one of three democrats who voted against. On the question of the draft act, which was passed in the winter of 1864, and which increased the power of the government to fill up our weakened armies, he was one of ten senators who voted against it on its original passage through the senate, and one of sixteen who voted against it on its final passage. He also voted against the passage of the supplement to the enrollment act, which was passed in July 1864. He did not vote for any measure that looked to carrying on the war. On the question of employing colored troops he was always in opposition, and was one of the most determined of the opposition to the administration of Abraham Lincoln in all its measures for putting down the rebellion. He was opposed to the amendment to the constitution abolishing slavery, and was one of the six senators who voted in the negative. He was opposed to the fourteenth amendment to the constitution, and was one of eleven senators who voted in the opposition.
