

WHAT IS ASIATIC CHOLERA

Its proper and improper treatment, with hints to its prevention.

Dr. John C. Peters, in the New York Herald.

"What is the distinguishing feature of Asiatic cholera, Doctor?"

It is this, I think, that the poison or germs of cholera invariably destroy the epithelium or soft skin lining the mucous membrane of the bowels, and lay it bare as if it had been flayed. Hence the redness and congestion of the mucous membrane. From the red surface the serum of watery portion of the blood flows in large quantities, just as it does from an ordinary blister on the skin. Previous to 1866 there enormous discharges were attributed to weakness and relaxation of the bowels, and I was the first to point out that they were due to the destruction of the epithelium. This is not a theory, but a fact, amply proved by post-mortem examinations, and destroying the germs, and not alone of restraining the discharges and soothing the raw mucous membrane.

"Here I may mention that much mischief has been caused by a popular medicine largely composed of red pepper, ginger and brandy, and which, though useful in cases of cholera morbus, is among the most injurious that could be selected in cases of real cholera. The reason is that the coldness of the surface of the body, or what is called, is caused by the tremendous irritation of the bowels, and that any further irritation naturally increases the collapse. Strange to say this medicine has been largely used for the past years. No skillful doctor, however, would dream of recommending it. Henceforward the scientific treatment of cholera will be based on the use of germicides. Of these sulphate of iron, suggested by me in 1866, gallic acid and all the dilute mineral acids, especially the sulphuric, are also astringents. The dilute sulphuric acid, especially the aromatic tincture, has attained the highest reputation as a preventive and cure of Asiatic cholera. Corrosive sublimate, which would probably be used by scientific physicians is not alone poisonous, but very dangerous, since it can only be used in a minute form. One particle would kill 20,000 germs. Still it is the most efficient germicide known at present. Koch recommends phenic acid, which is the same as chemically pure, carbolic acid. Chemically pure, mind, for the chemically impure has signally failed, since it has been proved that bacteria will live for a long time in strong solutions of it. Among the domestic preventives, the best to my mind are common table salt and vinegar, used separately and in fairly large quantities as condiments of food. A strong solution of chloride of soda, or table salt, would be as effectual as chloride of zinc or even chloride of mercury, which is the same as corrosive sublimate. If nurses and doctors washed their hands regular in vinegar while attending cholera patients, I feel sure they will escape the disease."

A MARINER'S GHOST STORY.

An Old Portland Ship-Master's Tale of a Haunted Vessel.

An old Portland ship-master recalls in the Press the following good ghost story. He says that one night on a voyage from which he had just returned, while lying off the battery at New York, waiting for the crew to come on board, he heard some one on the top of the house calling his name. Now this was not only the captain's name, but also that of his son, who was his mate on this voyage. Only the captain, mate and steward were on board, and on hearing the voice they all went on deck, but saw no one. The next day the bark sailed for Rio Janeiro, and several strange occurrences took place on the passage. One morning his son, the mate, said to him: "The ship is haunted. I tarred out on my watch at four o'clock in the morning, and as I went out of the cabin door I saw some one in white, but before I could distinguish whether it was male or female it disappeared around the main-mast. The steward said he saw it also, and was frightened." Some days after this the steward called the captain and told him the mate had not yet come on deck. The captain went to the mate's stateroom, and on opening the door saw the mate apparently laughing at him, but on taking hold of him he found he was dead. From his distorted countenance it appeared that he had been frightened to death. Several other strange occurrences happened on board, and on arriving at Rio the steward left the vessel on account of a feeling that she was haunted. Strange noises continued to be heard on board, such as the working of the windlass in heaving the anchor, but on going forward no one was to be seen. Now comes the strangest part of the story. During the captain's absence on the voyage another son of his arrived home from a voyage, and remarked that he would go down for his dunnage. He came back with it and lay down for a nap. Not coming down to tea some of the family went to call him and found him dead. This was about the time that the mate and steward saw the figure in white.

OF DAYS.

Thousands and thousands of men and women have their off days—days when they are not sick enough to give up, but when they go to bed, but as one describes it: "I feel so drowsy and weary—my head aches." "I never did have a meaner feeling in my life." "My stomach does not feel right." "Don't know what is the matter with me, but do not feel well." "I have a feeling of nausea." "Too cold one minute and too warm the next."

"To use a slang phrase, 'I am all broke up.'" The above and hundreds of similar expressions are heard daily, with some there is a known cause, others, however, account for the feeling. It may originate from different reasons, but from whatever cause, nature requires assistance and can immediately render the assistance and dispel all these unpleasant symptoms. By using Burdock Blood Bitters take them immediately on the appearance of the unpleasant feeling.

You will feel better in half-an-hour. Take it any time before or after meals. If before you will enjoy your meal better. If after it will aid digestion.

It is a medicine you can take at any time with good results, can be taken by the prattling child, or the feeble and tottering old man or woman. Composed of roots and herbs there is nothing in its composition that will injure the most delicate constitution, pleasant in taste and effect, will do you good.

MAKING A HUMAN FACE.

Thomas Colt's Thirteen Years of Experience Under the Surgeons.

In 1871 Thomas Colt, then twelve years old, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, suffering from a disease which had destroyed his nose and lips and had begun to effect his eyes. He was taken in charge by Dr. Gustavus Sabine, and since that time has been under treatment with a view to replacing the lost parts of the face. After the course of the disease had been checked, the process of making up was begun by cutting away the flesh about the edges of the orifice, where the nose had been. Then the inside of the large finger of the right hand was flayed, and the fresh cut wound was fitted where the nose should be. The hand was held in place by bandages and plaster of paris until the finger had grown fast to the forehead, and checks of the patient. The process of making up was covered by the hand, and a silver tube was inserted into the lad's throat through which he was fed and through which he also breathed.

When the grafting of the finger to the face was completed, and the circulation established the finger was amputated near the knuckle, leaving two-and-a-half joints attached to the face. The operation so far had required about a year, but the process was only begun. The next step was to trim down the finger into the shape of a nose by removing the bone and gradually building up the flesh on each side and drawing the skin from the cheeks and forehead over it. In course of time the result sought was obtained, except that there were as yet no nostrils.

The eyes of the unfortunate boy had both been drawn out of position somewhat, and these were straightened by clipping nerves in the manner usually adopted by oculists in treating cross-eyed people. The eyebrows were also patched up at the inner ends.

The next step was to give the boy a new pair of lips. This was done gradually by taking pieces of flesh from the cheeks and grafting them in place bit by bit. Yesterday after thirteen years of experience under a surgeon's knife, having meantime undergone and recovered from thirty different operations, the patient, now a young man, left the hospital. His face was smooth, and to the casual observer bore no traces of what he had passed through. The case is extraordinary for the extent of the work done and the perfect result obtained. Not less extraordinary was the fortitude of the patient, who never murmured under the necessarily painful operations, and who, when walking the floor because of his suffering, was wont to cheer up the other patients in the ward by telling droptales, of which he had a large supply. He was known in the hospital as "Patient Tommy."—N. Y. Sun.

Live Within Your Means.

From a Sermon by Talmage.

I have the highest commercial authority for saying that when the trouble broke out in Wall street last May there were $225,000,000 in suspense which had already spent. Spend no more than you make. And let us adjust all our business and our homes by the principles of the Christian religion. Our religion ought to mean just as much on Saturday and Monday as on the day between, and not be a mere periphrasis of sanctity. Our religion ought to first clean our hearts and then it ought to clean our lives. Religion is not, as some seem to think, a sort of church decoration, a kind of confectionery, a sort of spiritual caramel, or a sort of sanctified peppermint, or theological anesthetic. It is an omnipotent principle, all conquering, all conquering. You may get along with something less than that, and you may deceive yourself with it; but you cannot deceive God and you cannot deceive the world. The keen business man will put on his spectacles, and he will look clear through to the back of your head and see whether your religion is a fiction, or a fact. And you cannot hide your samples of sugar, or rice, or tea, or coffee if they are false; you cannot hide them under the cloth of a communion table. All your prayers go for nothing so long as you misrepresent your banking institution, and in the amount of the residue of you put down more specie and more fractional currency, and more clearing-house certificates, and more legal tender notes, and more loans, and more discounts than there really are, and when you give an account of your liabilities you do not mention all the unpaid dividends, and the United States bank-notes outstanding, and the inflated deposits, and the obligations to other banks and bankers. An authority more scrutinizing than that of any bank examiner will go through and through your business.

English Trade-Marks.

Mr. Edward Waters, Patent and Trade-marks office, 87 Bourne Street, Melbourne, Australia, writes: "One of my household suffered with tooth-ache and rheumatism and after trying numerous other remedies without relief, tried Jacobs Oil. It was rubbed on the cheek and plucked in the tooth, and well rubbed in for rheumatism. In both cases the cure was immediate and complete, and in neither case has the pain returned."

G. F. De Lisle telegraphs from Chuan, upper Lo Chuan, China, as follows: "Col. Donnier, after a brilliant engagement Friday, carried the heights commanding the fortress of Chu Faim, exposing a large entrenched Chinese camp, which was defended by five case-mated forts. The Chinese forces were very large. Their losses during the engagement were heavy. On Saturday they attempted to assume the offensive, but our artillery strewn the ground with bodies. After losing all their positions, the Chinese fled toward Langson, halted near Phutruong and Khanh. French lost twenty killed, including one officer, and ninety wounded; two officers were wounded. The troops were animated, and proceeded in the greatest order. The Chinese engaged were part of the best troops of the empire, perfectly armed and maneuvered in European style. The Chinese losses were 3,000 killed, including their chief commander. The Chinese invasion of Tonquin has been arrested in the direction of Langson."

ASIATIC CHOLERA.

Almost every case cured with

PERRY DAVIS' Pain-Killer

(From Rev. R. TELFORD, missionary in China, now visiting his home in Pennsylvania.)

DEAR SIR:—During a residence of some ten years as a missionary in Siam and China, I found your Vegetable Pain-Killer a most valuable remedy for that fearful scourge, the cholera. In administering the medicine, I found it most effectual to give a teaspoonful of Pain-Killer in a glass of water, sweetened with sugar. Then, after about fifteen minutes, begin to give about a teaspoonful of the same mixture every few minutes until relief was obtained. Apply hot applications to the extremities. Bathe the stomach with the Pain-Killer clear, and not the limbs brackly. Of those who had the cholera, and took the medicine faithfully in the way stated above, eight out of ten recovered.

Truly yours, R. TELFORD. The late Rev. Dr. Granger repeatedly expressed his belief that he owed his life to the timely use of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER. During his recent visit to the missions in Burma, he had a severe attack of the cholera, and was immediately relieved by the use of the Pain-Killer.
