The present status of the work of medical missions is such as to encourage the prosecution of this form of evangelism.

Charles M. When Mr. Schwab learned that the pupil had been compelled to decline a scholarship of $400, as he felt called upon to make his living, the steel man went to young Strayer and said: "If you will stay and complete this postgraduate course I will pay you $1,000." Telephone Poles for Egypt, The company operating a large telephone system in Egypt has experienced great difficulty in securing a suitable pole. The climate of the country is so hot and dry that good timber to use for a pole line for the transmission of an electric current does not grow, and timber imported from other countries dry-rot and becomes useless in a very short time. A certain pole imported from Sweden proved to be the most valuable, but its greatest life was not over four years. The company began negotiations, therefore, with cedar pole firms in the United States, with the result that arrangements were lately made with a Michigan firm, wholesale producers of cedar poles, ties and posts, for the shipment of 1,500 poles of the white cedar variety, Michigan grown, to

FACTS ABOUT SOUTH AMERICA

There Are Many Things We Do Not Know About Our Neighbor Country.

The United States was the first nation to recognize the independence of the South American republics, and over them it raised the aegis of the Monroe doctrine almost 80 years ago; yet, compared with the Europeans, we in America are profoundly ignorant about South America. We know almost nothing of its scenic wonders, for we do not visit them; our share in its exploration is insignificant; what information the world has of its flora and fauna has our knowledge of its ethnology also comes from them and the same may be said of the history of its people in the nineteenth century (from American sources almost no account of the rise of the Spanish republics can be had); and it is European and not American capital that has opened up its wildernesses, built its cities and railroads and established its industries.

How many Americans have seen Ecuador's "avenue of volcanoes," 20 of whose mighty crests exceed 15,000 feet, one of them 20,000, and three others, 19,000 feet? How many Americans have heard of the Paulo Affonso falls, on the Rio San Francisco, with their descent of 300 feet and volume of 150,000 cubic feet per second; or of the seven falls of Guayra, on the Parana, which, in combination during the rainy season, challenge the grandeur of Niagara? How many Americans are familiar with Gen. San Martin's achievement in making the passage of the Uspalata pass, 12,700 feet above sea level, with an army of 5,000 men, infantry, cavalry and artillery, in the war of independence in 1817? The Great St. Bernard, over which Napoleon led an army, is 5,000 feet lower than Uspalata. And writ in water, so far as most of us are concerned, is the heroic defense of the Paraguayans in the war of 1865-70 with Brazil, Argentine and Uruguay, when the population of Paraguay declined from 1,200,000 to 225,000, and none but women, old men and children were left of a people distinguished for their gentleness and amiability.

For the American naturalist, botanist, hunter and traveler no part of the world should have more attractions. Brazil alone has 1,700 species of birds, many of splendid iridescent plumage: no less than 50 kinds of apes; 50 varieties of snakes, including the water boa, which swallows horses and men; eight species of alligators, the yacareguazu 27 feet long; 24 bats, including the loathsome vampire (Phyllostoma Spectrum), two feet in wing stretch, that kills cattle and fastens on sleeping children; and 1,800 distinct marine creatures.

Eight thousand species of beetles have been recorded in Ecuador; in the calambo it has a snake which is domesticated and trained to patrol gardens, and in the flautero a bird whose song so resembles the sound of a flute as to deceive the practiced ear. Among the apes of equatorial South America is the howler, which has developed a kind of tribal organization under a chief who leads a chorus of dismal music, unlike that of any other animal, and heard for miles at dawn and sun-

A curiosity of the plant world in Peru is the Tamai caspi, or rain tree, which grows to a height of 60 feet and absorbs the humidity of the atmosphere in such abundance that in droughts water drips from its branches. So many strange things there are in the animal and vegetable kingdom of South America that no prudent person would do more than suggest the wealth of them, says H. E. Armstrong, in Ains-

In the first quarter of the twentieth century most of the exploration and exploitation of South America will be done by citizens of the United States, because the commercial interests of this country will point the way.

THE EYE PEST'S ORIGIN.

Granular Disease of the Eyelids Wa Taken Into Europe by Napoleon's Soldiers,

The prevalence of ophthalmia in the public schools has aroused great interest as to the characteristics of a pest which has caused the board of health to classify it as a contagious disease, says the New York Commercial Advertiser.

Dr. C. Cole Bradley, of this city, was seen and asked as to the actual conditions with regard to this disease.

"The disease is medically known as trachoma," he said. "It is commonly called granular disease of the eyelids, for which immigrants are excluded from this county. Ex-President Kruger recently underwent an operation for the cure of this disease. It used to be called Egyptian ophthalmia. used to be called Egyptian ophthalmia, and was spread all over Europe by the soldiers of Napoleon. This is the terror of all tourists in Egypt. We class all forms of eyelid disease under the name of contagious ophthalmia, but there are other forms of conjunctivities as well.

"The main form of the disease is known as trachoma and cannot be detected on casual inspection. It is of a most insidious nature. A child may have the disease for months without any external appearance. It lasts until the evelids have become so filled out with particles that the cornea is affected and the vision impaired. Then it becomes chronic, and is extremely difficult to cure. An operation is necessary as a rule, in the early stages, and therein lies the necessity of early discovery.

We are going through all the schools and fully maintained.

"The fact is that this is a most dangerous and insidious disease. Children suffering from measles and scarlet fever are sent home, but those with ophthalmia are allowed to remain and contaminate the others. I would rather have my child suffer from measles than from trachoma. The fact that the disease gives no outward indications for months is the worst part of the case."

IMPOSITION EXPOSED.

Calpurina Got Onto the Fact That Reginald's Panama Was Not the Real Thing.

Calpurina Bristol drew back with an ex-pression of horror upon her fair young face. Her bosom rose and fell like a tablecloth on a clothesline when the wind blows, and her delicate, sensitive nostrils dilated to the last notch, writes S. E. Kiser, in the Chicago Record-Herald.

Regunald Briggs saw at once that something was the matter. Instinctively his hand went up to his flecktie. It seemed to be in place, and his collar had not come unbuttoned.

"Fair one," he cried at last, when he could bear the strain no longer, "what is it? Nay, do not seek to conceal it from me. My reason tells me that you are agitated. Let me know the truth. I am strong. I can stand it."

"No, no, no!" she cried, burying her face in her hands and trying in vain to keep back her emotion. "Go away. Do not put me to the test. Oh, heaven! This is terri-Overcome by her emotion she sat down upon a rustic bench, and sobbed.

The young man bent over her and said in pleading tones:

"Cease!" she cried, dashing her tears away and indignantly facing him. "Never address me again! "I supposed that you were wearing a panama hat, but I see that it is only a $4 imitation. And I have walked all around the clubhouse in your company before everybody!"

He slipped out through a side gate a moment later and ran through the woods, wondering whether it would be better to try to live it down or keep on toward the setting sun.

Mr. Hutchins spent from 1861 to 1864 in the swamps of Louisiana as a northern soldier and with the result that he contracted Rheumatism which gave him much pain till Mr. Fred Parker, the local druggist, advised him to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first two boxes did not seem to help him very much, but Mr. Parker, knowing that Dodd's Kidney Pills would eventually cure him, pressed Mr. Hutchins to ue, and by the time four boxe used the short, sharp, shooting pains which had tortured his back, hip and legs were entirely gone. Mr. Hutchins says: "I cannot tell you how much better I am feeling. If it were not for the way my hands, feet and knees are drawn out of shape I would be about as good as ever."
