To show that Griggs Co. land is steadily advancing in value in spite of the present dull times the following is a fair example: The Nelson-Opfer Co. have just sold the southeast quarter of section 27-147-59, otherwise known as the old McMillan farm to a man from Minnesota making the third time this firm has sold this farm in the last two years. Sever Qualey and Martin Olson met with a bad accident while going home July 13th. They had a mower hitched to the rear of their rig and while going home a bad storm came up. They stopped at a neighbor's and got out for a minute. While standing around by the rig a sharp flash of lightning and a heavy clap of thunder frightened the team and they started to run, the cutter bar of the mower dropped and struck Qualey ripping his pants up the leg and knocking him to one side causing him to cut his head when he fell. Olson did not escape so lightly, however, he was caught and dragged for half a mile, one leg was broken and he was cut considerably. The boys got out of it much better than was anticipated under the circumstances.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The Sheyenne District of the United Lutheran Church assembled at Souris, N. D., adopted the following resolutions: Whereas, the Lord, whose ways are mysterious, has in his infinite wisdom and mercy seen fit through a fatal accident to call away from the church militant to the church triumphant our co-laborer and brother in the Lord, Rev. O. K. Quamme, and Whereas, we knew him as an energetic and zealous worker, a true friend and faithful pastor and the oldest minister in our district, be it therefore resolved,

That the Sheyenne District of the United Lutheran church expresses its heartfelt sympathy with his bereaved family and his congregations and pray that God will bring comfort to the afflicted hearts.

That we cherish the hope that the deceased has entered the full joy in heaven and that through Christ has received the reward which God has promised to all his faithful servants and our prayer is that the sorrow stricken family as well as we ourselves when the Lord shall call us away by death, may gather with him in the company of the elect.

That these resolutions be spread upon the record and a copy be sent to the bereaved family and a copy to each of his home papers for publication.

Our neighbors down at Hannaford hold the distinction of having the finest banking house in the county and probably is not surpassed in the state. The building has high basement and is one story high above the basement. It is entirely built of stone, native granite dressed and ranged having been used and the trimmings such as sills, arches, jambs, capings, etc. are of Portwing brown sand stone and together a very pleasing and substantial effect is produced. It is nearing completion and when finished will be a credit to the town and whole vicinity and we bespeak success for the enterprise. The design and plans were furnished by Architect W. C. Albrant, of Fargo, who is catching on to considerable business up this way.

DIED—On Thursday afternoon, July 14, 1904, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Langford in Cooperstown, Kenneth, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Houghton, from a complication of diseases. The little fellow was as well as could be July 4th and it is said that he ate too many peanuts, candy, etc., that brought on stomach trouble which was followed by other complications. The little boy was a year and eight months old and was a beautiful little boy, the idol of his heart broken parents. The funeral took place in the Methodist church last Saturday afternoon Rev. J. S. DeLong officiating. Interment was made in the cemetery. The loss of their little boy is indeed a very hard blow to Mr. and Mrs. Houghton and their many friends in town and throughout the county deeply sympathize with them in their great loss.

The noted case of Henry Cramer of Clara City, Minn., against the Northwestern Elevator company, of Minneapolis, has been decided in favor of the defendant. There is involved in this case a question of vital interest to the grain trade and to every northwestern farmer—the right of a country elevator manager to issue receipts for grain in form other than that prescribed by statute and the regulations of the railroad and warehouse commission, and the binding power of such receipts or memoranda upon the elevator company.

The case was bitterly fought in June, 1901, was lost by the defendant, went before the Minnesota supreme court, was sent back for retrial, and came up again last month at Granite Falls. Fifteen or more rough slips bearing memoranda in numbers and signed by J. Keely, agent of the Northwestern Elevator company, but without date or other marks of definiteness, made up the principal exhibit. The court decided that such receipts are not binding upon the elevator company and are not collectable. In the case in question the elevator company was able to show that there was no record on their books that they had even received the grain and that their agent had never notified the Minneapolis office of any such receipts. The first knowledge of it came with the presentation of the slips in question, which, the farmers claimed, were issued to them by Keely for grain taken in.

With the decision in mind farmers and country elevator men will need far greater caution hereafter. Altho the state has prescribed the form of receipts to be issued, it has been the custom to disregard this in many instances.

The news that these memoranda are worthless in law, in the event of an error or dispute arising, will surprise many farmers who have taken them without question.
