Col. N. A. Patterson has been busy cutting out clippings of the big blizzard that struck Pennsylvania, Monday of this week and sending them back to Mrs. Patterson who has gone to York, Pa., to spend the winter—a sort of summer resort. At York they had a foot of snow, telephone and telegraph poles, trees, etc., blown down and a merry time generally. N. A. thinks maybe that when his wife hears of our beautiful Indian summer weather she may cut her visit short and return to the banana belt—the land of eternal sunshine. Long head has Bro. Patterson.

John K. Olson sends us a check from Poulso, Wash., to pay for his COURIER. He says:

Please find enclosed check for another round trip, we can't be without the family journal, it is the first paper we read here. This has been the finest fall I ever saw. Some people say that the climate has built up western Washington, well there are other things and many things to build up this section, but the climate has done its share of it. We haven't seen any frost since the first part of March. The price on land is way up, here. Close to the sound it is $100 per acre. I bought 40 acres 1/4 miles from the beach for $50 per acre, some cleared, a good bunch of timber, new house and barn, and don't mention the stumps they would make fine bachelors dwellings.
