COOPERSTOWN, : NORTH DAKOTA.

THE COURIER. By Percy R. Srubshaw.

Fargo has a street railway and it is no fault of the papers of that city if that fact is not well advertised. They are as tickled over the street cars as a boy with his first pair of red-topped boots—and we guess they have reason to be.

With only one democrat elected to the North Dakota legislature the speaker will not have much trouble assigning the democratic party places on the committees. He can put this fellow on the tail end of each committee.

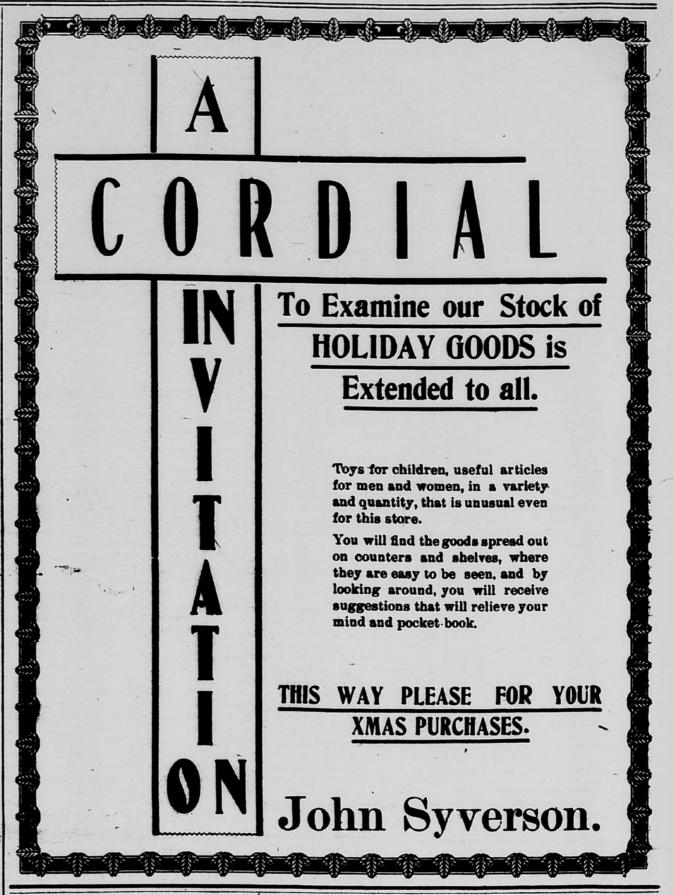

Ex-Mayor A. A. Ames, of Minneapolis, is now undergoing his fifth trial. He has been convicted once, the jury disagreed the last three times and now he is being tried again. The tax payers of that city would no doubt like to either see the doctor convicted or turned loose. These trials are expensive.

The legislature will meet the first week in January and the usual bushel or two of worthless bills will be introduced as of yore. The one most important measure that the people demand this time is a primary election law covering every election office in the state. The people demand such a measure and it is up to the legislature to quit its horse play and pass a primary law something after the one now in force in Wisconsin.

The St. Louis World's Fairthe greatest of them all-closed it doors on December 1st and has now passed into history. It was a stupendous undertaking and the citizens of that Missouri city are to be congratulated upon the success of the undertaking. It is said that the fair will pay for itself but that the surplus in vor of the promoters will not be large. The business men of St. Louis however have had a gold mine for the past seven months. Over eighteen million of people visited the exposition-one-fifth of the entire population of the country, which is not bad.

The farmers of this county have faith in the future prosperity of the country as evidenced by the eager manner in which the school lands were purchased last week and the good prices paid for them. North Dakota cheap land is now a thing of the past and real estate will increase in value right along. The man who owns a section of Griggs county land has a small fortune and is sure of a good livingsomething that can't be said of many states in the northwest. The men who have stuck to their farms through all these years are the men who are now reaping the harvest.

A pupil in one of the public schools of this state, being required to write a paper on North Dakota, handed in the following essay: "North Dakota is bounded on the north by Judson LaMoure, on the east by Porter J. McCumber, on the south by Tom Marshall, on the west by the Mandan Pioneer. Its capital is Chas. K. Bassett of Valley Oity Alliance, the interior is occupied by Pat Rourke. Its naturally severe climate is modified by hot air emanating from the Wahpeton newspapers. Its habitants belong to the republican race; its chief production is politicians and the principal occupation is talking politics." The teacher marked the paper 100.
