Why is it that a policeman of mediim build can handle frequently two and sometimes three men his size in s fight? An officer on the local force was discussing the question. "I'll tell you why it is," be said. "It is simply be cause the policeman is in uniform. The uniform denotes authority, and that takes the nerve out of his opponents to a certain extent. They know that they are breaking the law by resisting him, while he might even kill them and not commit a crime. All through a fight with a policeman the other fellow or fellows are thinking of escape. The officer isn't. He's thinking of subduing and arresting the man or men. He puts his whole effort and strength into it, while his opponents generally fight in a half hearted way. Put a policeman in citizen's clothes, with his star under his coat, and he wouldn't be able to whip two men his size any more than you would unless the two men knew he was an officer of the law."-Kansas

The courtship of the Saitis pulex, a spider, is described by an expert in insect life as a most elaborate exhibition of skill and grace in dancing. Balancing his body on his long legs, he moves in a semicircle for about two inches and then, reversing the position, twists and turns in the opposite direction, repeating this grotesque figure scores of times and pausing every few minutes to rock from side to side and to bend his brilliant legs so that they may be brought into full view of his admiring mate. A similar display, but with varied antics, marks the lovemaking of other sorts of spiders, but this manner of courting is not without its risks, and it may often happen that the lively suitor, if he prolongs his performance or shows off his points of perfection too persistently, is suddenly cular mate.

A young bride was invited to bridge whist luncheon and, after spending a delightful afternoon, was told by her hostess that she was in debt $75. Mrs. -, unaware that she had been playing for money, was horrified at the idea of having to ask her husband for the necessary amount.

She mournfully confided her woes to him, and he immediately wrote a check for $76.50 and sent it to the hostess. The hostess, believing that a mistake had been made, informed him that he had sent $1.50 too much. Mr. -, however, returned it with the curt statement that the $75 settled the bridge score and the balance was for his wife's luncheon.-New York
