

IN THE METROPOLIS

LAWSON AGAIN SPOILS THE WALL-STREET GAME.

NEW YORK IN THE FUTURE

Underground Roads Must Handle the Tremendous Through-Engineers Think Elevated Lines Will Be Palled Down.

NEW YORK—Every year there are, on Wall Street, the three great shearings of the lambs—one in September, one in December, one in January. It is not that something went wrong with the September shearing this year.

The September game is always to utilize an August bull market as a means of getting the lambs into the street. Prices are going up, up, up—the bucket shop advertisements know no limit. Every speculator on a large scale knows better; knows that the September demand for money to "move the crops" will five times out of six put the kibosh up on the August bull market before it is a month older, but each man relies upon his own agility to get out in time.

This year by the end of August all was going as usual. The "index figure" made by striking an average of 20 representative railroad stocks and 20 "industrials" was higher than ever before. That of itself was warning enough for investors. The bucket shoppers redoubled their frantic cries; even the banks were inactive, waiting for higher prices to sell on.

It was Lawson who spoiled the game again; that is why Wall Street could not forgive him. Just as the first timid flock of lambs was venturing into the street, just as 1,100 professional and 50,000 amateur operators were ready to shout "I saw them first," Lawson began again, and the woolly-tails scampered away. Really, it was too aggravating. Philosophers like myself felt as the little girl did, looking at the picture of Daniel in the lions' den. "Look, mamma!" she cried, "there is one poor lion ain't going to get any."

There was just one true reason why the market at the end of August was going up, according to the men with something to say about it, was that Russia and Japan were making peace. The property of the country—well, that is something we all take for granted until it stops. You cannot sell stocks on that. The lamb is from Missouri and you have to show him.

There were these and other reasons why stocks should go down: Higher interest rates surely coming; coal strike threatened next year; insurance investigating committee about to expose financial rascality; Russian anarchy in the Caucasus; new Russian and Japanese loans to be made sooner or later; New York bank surplus getting low; Bank of England rate about to go up; and, most important of all, the powerful clique of bull operators that had managed the bull movement for four months, ready to unload, as Lawson saw all this and struck at the right moment. Just as he did last December.

The Banks Help the Gamblers.

HERE is a thing that the rest of the country finds it hard to forgive in New York: the help the banks give the stock gamblers. Not that the bankers loaned money all summer at two per cent to "bull pools"; that's business, if the alternative is to have it lie idle in the vaults. Money can loan can always be got at short notice if needed; there is no danger in that. But when the bottom dropped out in the first few days of September, a full week earlier than the pools had been counting upon, the banks began manipulating the weekly returns they are obliged by law to make by turning over some of their loans to trust companies. As early as September 9 good judges said that the banks would have shown a deficit if loans had not thus been transferred. A $30,000,000 loan reduction was on the face of it bogus. A $10,000,000 cash reduction was genuine; that could not be concealed. The obvious purpose was to give the bulls a few more days to unload on the stry lamb or two left in the field before the inevitable calls for money were resumed. What has happened since is market history.

The December game is still ahead. It is this: Prices are generally raised in November; then an annual tip goes out that dividend payments of some $200,000,000 have to be made on January 1 and prices are bound to rise on "dividend buying" early in January. The "New Year's rise" it is called, just as if there were such a thing. When the game works right, the lambs begin to struggle in through December, and stocks are gradually unloaded upon them, but not so as to break quotations; indeed, they usually rise; then after January 1 the lambs continue buying, the operators sell and the "January rise" is like the core of the boy's apple; "there ain't none." That is what would have happened last December; did happen to some extent.

The Growth of New York.

SPOKE a few weeks ago of 250,000 souls as the number for which New York builders were preparing houses and flats. The number is raised by fuller returns to 300,000. In five years, room for more than a million new residents has been provided; of course the million have not come, because part of the new housing is not finished

FLICKERTAIL NUGGETS.

Medina—Some six near here went nineteen bushels.

Upham—A bridge has been built on Cut Bank, near here.

Fargo—North Dakota has now over 100 national banks.

Walcott—Some fine samples of apples are found here.

Wheelock—H. R. Schriver is the new postmaster at this place.

Veiva—There are thousands of acres of fine flax around here.

Minot—Boxcar merchants have been working northern Ward county.

Serwick—A farmer near here was laid out by a woman with a mop.

Harvey—A switch engine service has been inaugurated here by the Soo.

Ashley—A 30,000 acre tract of land in this county recently changed ownership.

Minot—James W. Watson was arrested for raising a check for $3.70 to $3.70.

Jamestown—The government has planted a lot of black bass in Lake Metigoshe.

Wahpeton—This station shipped 2,000,000 pounds of binding twine during the season.

Newburg—The boxcar depot here was burglarized of $25 in cash, as well as some goods.

Fargo—North Dakota has raised some of the finest corn this year ever grown anywhere.

Devils Lake—Dunselth wants another mail route established, with connections at York.

Minot—The indications are that the depositors in the Minot National bank will be paid in full.

Fargo—In Mercer county two young fellows were fined $80 and $35 respectively for assault and battery.

Washburn—The Soo is said to have a detached 300 cars early in the shipping season to carry grain.

Hankinson—A local fruit store man gets his apples from the orchards of Colonel Hankinson of this place.

Harvey—There are said to be several cases of scarlet fever near here that have not been officially reported.

Flasher—Corn has been picked in Morton county, near here, that will average thirteen inches to the ear.

Wahpeton—There will be some fine short-horn cattle from Barnes county at the stock sale in Fargo this winter.

Bismarck—Oliver county is said to have a wheat crop that is averaging from twenty to thirty-five bushels per acre.

St. John—The Great Northern has about secured the right of way for the extension of the branch to Brandon, Minn.

Des Lacs—Some merchants refused to patronize the local paper and then kicked when the editor ran ads from Minot.

Edgeley—A theater became intoxicated and started to lick the town marshal. He was fined enough to cool him off.

Portia—The Canadian policeman, who helped the blind piggers to escape, has been taken to Regina for court martial.

Grand Forks—The city council has appropriated $112,920 for city expenses the coming year, which makes a tax levy of 27 mills.

Fox Lake—A farm hand named Jordan, whose home is supposed to have been near Muncie, Ind., was killed by lightning near here.

Liabon—Some of our citizens protested against the violation of the Sabbath in hunting, keeping stores open, working, fishing, etc.

Fargo—The success of the alfalfa crop in this state is one of the most promising evidences of future prosperity of the farmers.

Wahalla—There is one case of diphtheria here, but it is properly isolated and no fears are entertained of a spread of the disease.

Flasher—Wheat around here is going 37 bushels of No. 1 northern. A few years ago this section was thought fit only for cattle raising.

Toga—The citizens of this place took pains to keep the telegrapher protected during the strike, and a new depot is promised as a reward.

Courtenay—Courtenay farmers are unable to secure cars to ship their grain or enough room in the elevators to store their grain, and are compelled to build granaries.

Qanabrook—The Albion hotel was burned here. The loss is about $4,000 and there is an insurance of about half that amount. The hotel was owned by George Plante. The fire started in a bedroom but from what cause is not known.

Wahpeton—Roderick J. Campbell, a laboring man, was killed near the Fairview farm, west of here by the weed-burning machine on the Northern Pacific. Campbell had evidently been walking along the track and was hit by the engine.

Bisbee—Frank Bremer was arrested for passing a bad bill. His defense was substantially that he did not pass the bill, that it was a good one anyway, and that when he was arrested at Rolette for passing one just like it the court told him that he could pass as many as he could get people to take.

Bismarck—The governor is still raising funds to keep the state exhibit at Portland till the exposition closes. The success of the exhibit has been so pronounced that it cannot be removed just now when the farmers of the west are making their visit to the big show.

Grand Forks—Most of the wheat of the state this year is grading No. 2 northern. A few years ago this would have been considered a poor grade, but the grades have been changed since the days of No. 1 hard, and the present grain is about equal to that which graded No. 1 northern some years ago.

Hankinson—Colonel Hankinson was the original apple grower of North Dakota. He has a fine orchard which has yielded bountifully for a number of years. He says that the only reason why North Dakota does not raise more apples is that the people do not plant more trees.

New Government for Old Chief. Since the government players such have been granted temporary licenses, made his first appearance in England for some seasons the other day on the French horse Nimay, and came off fourth in the St. Leger. The stakes were won by the outsider Chalkcombe at odds of 15 to 1. Polymeus was second and Cherry Lass third. Eight horses started.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Louis Rogers Browning, better known as "Old Pete," the gladiator of the baseball diamond, is dead. His death occurred at Louisville, Ky., and was due to an affection of the mastoid bone of the ear.

"Old Pete" was one of the most noted characters ever connected with the game of baseball. In his day he was fully as famous as is Rube Waddell of the Philadelphia Athletics, and in many respects the men were alike.

In addition to being great ball players they had marked eccentricities. Browning was one of the best batters the profession has seen. He was a natural hitter, and a hard one, a good base-runner, and a fair fielder.

In appearance he was singularly tall and slender, slightly stooped, and possessed a peculiar forward pointing pair of ears. Browning was quite deaf, which, of course, was responsible for many of his peculiarities.

Batting was his forte and his fad, and his temper after a game was reckoned by the number of hits he had made, regardless of the outcome of the contest. Ball players declared him to be the best judge of a bat in the country, and he generally had a good assortment of them, and made a specialty of preserving them.

At the end of a season he would put them away in a water. One of them he would keep in a box for a month, another for six weeks, and so on, declaring that each required a certain treatment. Then he would oil them carefully and have them in fine trim for the next campaign.

When showing his assortment he would speak of the bats much as a trainer would of his stable of race-horses. "Ah, that is a fine two-year-old," he would declare, and he picked one out of the lot, and "this one is a four-year-old," he would say of another. Players declare Browning never could be persuaded to sell a bat, no difference how much he was offered for one of them, but often when a player looked longingly at some particular stick in Pete's assortment, and said he wished he owned it, Browning surprised the man by making him a present of it. Browning and Fred Pfeffer began playing on the town lots in Louisville at about the same time, and both drifted together, eventually, in the famous old Eclipse team of that city—one of the best exclusively home teams ever known in America.

Pfeffer left the club to go to the Chicago Nationals while Browning went with the rest of the Eclipse players into the Louisville club of the American association. He became third baseman on the team and remained in that position for two seasons. Later he was shifted to the outfield, which position he played as long as he remained in the game. He continued with the Louisville team until 1888. In the following year he went to Pittsburgh and in 1890 became a member of the Cleveland team at a salary of $4,800. His batting average that season was .450. His last work was with the Louisville National league team in 1895.

The new school of tennis players scored a pronounced triumph in the recent championship tournament at Newport, and as a result the forcing and aggressive game is now the fashionable style of play. Beals Wright, of Boston, the new national champion of America, won his laurels by beating former champion Holcombe Wad, his long-time partner in doubles, for the title. Mr. Wright is left-handed, covers a lot of ground and plays the aggressive, forcing game which has become so successful in the past year. His style is dashing and aggressive, rather than careful and safe, as that of Larned, the old champion, who is still in the game, and whom Wright beat easily at Newport. Wright did splendid work for the American team in England. Had his partner, Ward, been at all as good a man when the Americans were in England, there is not any doubt that the Davis cup doubles would have gone to the invaders. Ward was unsteady, however, and the cup stayed in England.

Krigh Collins has won the western championship nine times in 12 years and nine times out of ten actual trials. He did not compete two years and was beaten in the finals on another occasion. Great things were expected of him at Newport, but he failed to come up to expectations. He was not in form. At Cincinnati a week later he saved Mr. Wright a terrific struggle for the tri-state championship, but lost. Collins is a very fast and brilliant player. He had a lot of hard luck in his games with Wright at Cincinnati, yet drove the champion to the limit to beat him in 16 sets. Collins found it hard to get his balls cleanly over the net. Many of his net drives just did not hit the netting and dropped back. Had his line drives and net balls gone safe he would have beaten Wright.
