

Mrs. Brown's Opinions.

What is my opinion of true politeness and good manners? In the common acceptance, these two terms are synonymous, but in the real essence their differentia (this is a new word for me, and I may not have it right) is very marked, and the one is easily shown to the superior of the other. That is, one is heart, the other is art, and in character, we are not long in deciding which of those qualities is preferred. True politeness may be found among people who have never had a day's training in the school of etiquette, but good manners must be taught. A man who is truly polite, takes his politeness home with him, and it shows in the pleasant faces of the wife and children, and in their own politeness. Good manners may thrive well all day, while the man meets his customers or patron in office or store, but when he leaves his business, he hangs them on the peg where his hat has been hanging all day, and goes home gruff and ugly, to meet his wife and children, whose good manners he has shaped very much as his own. Good manners are prevalent in our best society, but I regret to say that true politeness is oftentimes very seldom. The nice young man, who can bow and smile in ten languages, and wear his store clothes in sixteen places at once, is petted by the ladies and flattered by constant references to his "perfect manners," and yet, when he is his natural self, among his home folks or other subordinates, he is nine times in ten as coarse and ill-mannered as a rough from the slums. With woman, the same rule holds, and she who is all grace and sweetness in company, is a "holly terror" when out of it. It is because I know these things to exist, that I have no fear in drawing clearly the line of demarcation between true politeness and good manners. Hundreds of stories have been told illustrating this question, and in the majority of instances true politeness is found among those in whom good manners are less abundant. A rough, hard-handed laborer, who couldn't wear good clothes if he had them, who would kick over half the brick a brace in a parlor trying to bow, who doesn't know the first principle of society manners may be, for all that, a gentleman uncultured, truly, but so adorned with true politeness that he wins the respect and honest admiration, the merely good-mannered man could not hope to attain by years of study of the art of being politeness cannot be acquired; it may be cultivated and new beauties given it, but the underlying beauty never changes, because it is of the soul; and the soul is infinite. Good manners, on the contrary, are nothing but cultivation; they are merely of the brain and body; and brain and body are finite. True politeness, as distinguished from good manners, finds its perfect exemplar in Christ, of whom the poet, Decker, has boldly but piously written:

"A soft, meek, patient, humble, tranquil spirit. The first true gentleness that ever breathed." —Merchant Traveler.

Earl Cairns.

Lady Cairns' announcement written on a half-sheet of note paper and affixed to the outer gate of Lindisfarne, which informed the inhabitants of Bournemouth somewhat abruptly that Lord Cairns had "entered into rest at 6:45" on Thursday morning, took everybody by surprise. He had taken horse exercise on three days before, and was walking about the cliffs on Tuesday. His health had for some time caused his friends considerable anxiety, and he had been for the past month under the care of Mr. Nankivell, a local homeopathic practitioner. On Wednesday Dr. Kidd was summoned by telegraph, but Lord Cairns was already sinking. The ex-lord chancellor will be much missed at Bournemouth. It is somewhat remarkable that both the conservative and the liberal lord chancellors should have devoted themselves in private so energetically to church work. Like Lord Selborne, Lord Cairns was an indefatigable Sunday-school teacher; regularly, when at Bournemouth, presiding over the bible class in connection with Holy Trinity church, the young men crowding to his teaching. He was also a popular president at missionary and other religious gatherings, and he cordially sympathized with the evangelistic work of his son-in-law, Hon. and Rev. Neville Sherbrooke. He was also a firm supporter of Rev. Canon Eliot, vicar of Holy Trinity, the Evangelical church of Bournemouth, a place of worship which had, one Sunday during the regime of the late government, the singular distinction to include four cabinet ministers in its congregation. —London World.

Society Reform at Washington.

So Washington society has cut a young man dead for getting drunk at a ball, dragging a young lady up to dance willy-nilly, and fisticuffing a gentleman that came to her rescue, has it? Then all that any one who has seen even a little of life at the capital can say is, that Washington society has had a sudden attack of virtue. It will doubtless recover from it, and after the spasm has passed be its old self again, only rather more so; but in the meantime the sudden access of goodness is being enjoyed as only a novelty can. Last winter that same young man could have gotten tight and misbehaved with impunity; of that I am morally certain, for a similar case occurred and no such row was raised as was last week. —St. Louis Spectator.

"O, Lor' Hit 'Im Again!"

In the early days of Methodism in Scotland, a certain congregation, where there was but one rich man, desired to build a new chapel. A church meeting was held. The old rich Scotchman rose and said: "Brethren, we dimma need a new chapel: I'll give £5 for repairs."

Just then a bit of plaster falling from the ceiling hit him on the head.

Looking up and seeing how bad it was, he said: "Brethren, its worse than I thought; I'll make it 50 pun."

"Oh, Lord," exclaimed a devoted brother on a back seat, "hit 'im again!"

There are many human tabernacles which are in sore need of radical building over, but we putter and fuss and repair in spots without satisfactory results. It is only when we are personally alarmed at the real danger that we act independently, and do the right thing. Then it is that we most keenly regret because we did not sooner use our judgment, following the advice born of the experience of others and jump away from our perils.

Thousands of persons who will read this paragraph are in abject misery to-day when they might be in a satisfactory condition. They are weak, lifeless, full of odd aches and pains, and every year they know they are getting worse, even though the best doctors are patching them in spots. The origin of these aches and pains is the kidneys and liver, and if they would build these all over new with Warner's safe cure as millions have done, and cease investing their money in miserably unsuccessful patchwork, they would be very well and happy and would bless the day when the Lord "hit 'em" and indicated the common-sense course for them to pursue. —London Press.

The Sentence of Riel.

"Louis Riel," said Judge Richardson in deep tones, "after long duration, attended by able counsel, you have been found guilty of the greatest crime that can be committed. It has been proved that you let loose the gate of bloodshed. You have brought ruin and misery to many families. For what you have done the law requires that you must answer. It is true the jury have asked the mercy of her majesty. While sitting here a notice has been placed in my hands by your counsel, who will take action in a higher court. For me, I have only to say, I would suggest to you to prepare to meet your end. My duty is a painful one to me. You will be taken from here to the Regina jail, where you will remain until the 25th of September next, when you will be taken out and hanged by the neck until dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

Relinquishing Down South.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Mr. John T. Bruce, of the United States Revenue Collector's Office, informed an editor of the Daily Press, of this city, that for seven years he suffered terribly from rheumatism in his ankle, which most of the time was swollen to two or three times its natural size, and was so painful that he could not put his foot to the ground. After trying everything he could think of without obtaining relief, he at ten o'clock one morning applied St. Jacob's Oil, and shortly afterwards made two further applications. At three o'clock that afternoon the pain was gone, the swelling also disappeared, and the cure was as permanent as it was quick.

A Ridiculous Indian Scare.

A wedding took place six miles north of Graceville, the other evening, and some thirty or forty guests, with guns, balls, etc., went to the place to celebrate, and making them believe the Indians were taking possession of the country. Some twenty-five farmers took their families and gathered up what they could carry and drove into the city for safety. It was about 2 o'clock at night, and as soon as the news of the "outbreak" reached here the church bells were set in motion. Father McDonald and citizens escorted the women and children to the Catholic church, and the men of the town put to arms. Banker Fish was chosen captain of the troops to guard the city, while Col. T. Conley headed the artillery toward the scene of "battle," where everything was found peaceable.

"One Nail Drives Out Another."

is a French saying that finds exemplification in the way one disease will substitute itself for another and graver one, in very many cases. Liver disease for instance will soon induce blood disorders, throat ailments, skin affections and eventually, because of impoverished blood, consumption if, unless, indeed, it be treated in its incipient and early progress by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which acts as a specific cure by its powerful alternative action upon the great organs of the body.

Your Friends Will Never Tell You, but perhaps your body, who don't tell you, will tell you, if you are not careful of your health. Every word you utter, thought in the very echo of wisdom and poetry, discards your health, and your laugh is productive of anything but mirth to them. It is a duty you owe, not only to yourself, but to society to remove this cause of offense. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will heal the diseased mucous membrane, will bring relief to yourself and others. Do not hesitate to employ it.

Hay Fever is a type of catarrh having peculiar symptoms. It is attended by an inflamed condition of the lining membrane of the nostrils, tear ducts and throat, affecting the discharge, is accompanied with a burning sensation. There are severe spasms of sneezing, frequent attacks of headache, watery and inflamed eyes. Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy founded on a correct diagnosis of this disease and can be depended upon. 50 cts. at druggists or by mail. Send for circular. Ely Bros., Druggists, Oswego, N. Y.

For several years I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of Hay Fever. At the suggestion of COVERT & CHEEVER, Druggists, I obtained Ely's Cream Balm and used a portion of it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.

ECZEMA. For the benefit of suffering humanity, I feel it only my duty to give this unsolicited testimony in favor of Swift's Specific. My wife has been afflicted with Eczema from infancy. We tried every known remedy, but to no avail. She was also afflicted with a periodical nervous headache, sometimes followed by an intermittent fever, so that her life became a burden to her. Finally I determined to try Swift's Specific. She commenced seven weeks ago. After taking the first large bottle the disease seemed to increase; the burning, itching and inflammation became unbearable. She, however, persevered in the use of the medicine. After taking the second bottle the inflammation began to subside. After the third bottle the inflammation disappeared, and were spots dried up and turned white and scaly, and finally she brushed them off in an impalpable white powder resembling pure salt. She is now taking the sixth bottle; every appearance of the disease is gone, and her skin is soft and white as a child's. Her headaches have disappeared and she enjoys the only good health she has known in 40 years. No wonder she loaves every bottle of S. S. S. It is worth a thousand times its weight in gold. Any further information concerning her case will be cheerfully given by herself at her residence, 135 Mullett Street, or by me.
