

New York Girls Aping English Manners.

From a Letter in the San Francisco Argonaut.

I was very much amused by the antics of a would-be English girl and unquestionably British bull terrier on Fifth Avenue recently. She came out of the front door of her house with a good deal of a swing—tall, slim, well-formed and composed. Her costume was of black and white material—I have a dim sort of a suspicion that it was either silk or satin—and she wore small, square-toed boots, a jaunty hat, gloves of a tan color and a rather refined "horsey" look in general. She carried a riding whip in one hand and clutched a silver chain in the other. To the other end of the chain was reluctantly attached a black-muzzled and supercilious bull-pup, with a bad "e. His fore-legs were bowed, his tail and ears stuck aloft, his chest was broad and he had almost no nose at all. His under jaw was held forward and his mouth had the peculiarly insolent look of a pup of thorough-bred blood. The girl had an indescribably starchy appearance, was extremely straight and her manner was haughty. She descended the steps with an admirable effectation of carelessness, considering that at least a score of men were staring at her, and turned up Fifth Avenue. At all events the manœuvre was not a success. The dog suddenly shot around in another direction and wound the tall girl up in his chain. She struck him sharply with her whip and he growled; then she hit him again and the brute started to jump at her, when a man, who was passing, shouted at him sharply. The girl went at him pluckily again, whipped him into perfunctory obedience, said, "I am greatly obliged" to the man who had attempted to rescue her and started up the avenue. Even during the excitement her accent was irreproachably English and she was altogether as full-blown and complete a specimen of an Anglo-maniac as I have ever seen. The girls here have a peculiarly English walk, or one that passes for English now, and this particular beauty practiced it to perfection.

Hygiene of the Aged.

Dr. L. H. Watson, in Popular Science Monthly.

To those who have arrived at an advanced age without any form of indigestion I would suggest a cup of coffee and a piece of dry toast before rising in the morning. The reason why this should be served while one is yet in bed is that very old people, even when perfectly well, are often subject to a slight faintness and nervous tremor before rising, and the exertion necessary to dress often leaves them too faint to eat. It takes but a few moments to prepare it, and, as old people like to rise early, it is usually an hour or two before the family are prepared for the morning meal. A light luncheon at noon, and dinner not later than 5 or 6 o'clock. If the dinner is taken at noon, and supper at 6 o'clock, it will be found to suit the habits of the aged better in one way, as old people love to retire early. In most countries, among civilized nations, the practice of crowding three meals into the twelve hours or more of daylight has grown to be such a habit that it seems a heresy to suggest eating when hungry, day or night; nevertheless, I would suggest to the healthy and not too aged person to forget the "bugbear" of "not eating before retiring," which compels many a person—otherwise disposed—to pass ten or twelve hours with the stomach in a collapsed condition, while during the other twelve it is constantly distended with food. I would say to the aged, eat sparingly and eat frequently. Let your food be light and easily digestible, but eat when hungry, whether it be 12 o'clock at noon or 12 o'clock at night. Aged people are light sleepers, and often wake up during the night with an intense craving for food, and a good plan is to have a cup of bouillon and a cracker on a stand near the bed. The broth can be readily heated by an alcohol lamp in five minutes. This simple habit will often procure hours of uninterrupted slumber, which would otherwise be passed in restless longing for daylight and breakfast.

A Bar Room Transaction That Made a Noise.

Chicago News.

They wore winter clothes, and about their eyeballs and noses there was the sanguinary color of the radish when it is ripe. The smirking affability of the Clark street bartender dissolved as they entered, and in its stead there came a sickening glare of forced civility. "What will it be, gentlemen?" he asked through sheer force of habit, as they ambled up to the bar. "Whiskey for me," said one, glancing up at the ceiling cross-eyed. "Me too," supplemented the other. Two suicidal potions of amber alcohol disappeared, and two pairs of lips smacked ecstatically. "You will excuse me sir," said one, delving an index finger into a vest pocket, "but I'm a little short of change this morning, but if you have no objections I will pay you in stamps. "Stamps are as good as money," rejoined the bartender, "just as good." "Thank you, old fel," chorused the pair. And then they stamped on the floor, until the bottles and glasses behind the bar rattled and jingled, winked at a fat man who was gagging himself with frozen absinthe, and stole softly into the crisp morning air.

What Sporting Men Rely on.

When Lewis R. Redmond, the South Carolina moonshiner, cornered, after for eight years eluding the government officials, was asked to surrender, he exclaimed:

"Never, to men who fire at my back!" Before he was taken, five bullets had gone clear through him, but strange to relate, he got well, in the hands of a rude backwoods nurse.

By the way, if Garfield had been in the hands of a backwoods nurse, he might have lived. A heap of volunteer testimony against the infallibility of the physicians has been accumulating of late, and people are encouraged to do their own doctoring more and more. It is cheaper and quite as certain.

Before Detective Curtin of Buffalo caught Tom Ballard he "covered" him with his revolver. Tom saw the point and tumbled!

Joe Gross was "covered" a few weeks ago and he tumbled, and so did Dan Mace. Death "fetched em" with that dreaded weapon—kidney disease. But they should have been lively and drawn first. They could easily have disarmed the monster that they covered him with that dead shot—Warner's safe cure, which, drawn promptly, always takes the prey. It is doubtless true that sporting men dread this enemy more than any mishap of their profession, and presumably this explains why they as a rule are so partial to that celebrated "dead shot."

Redmond was right. No man should surrender when attacked in the back. He should "draw" his face about and proceed to the defense, for such attacks, so common among all classes, will fetch a man every time unless "covered" by that wonderfully successful "dead shot."—Sportsman's News.

Fresh Air For The Brain.

A physician noted for his skill in curing nerve diseases almost invariably separates the patient from her family, her old nurses, and the familiar, anxious, sympathizing circle of friends, and places her in a cheerful atmosphere, among new faces and scenes, where she no longer can believe herself the centre of the universe.

"There is a certain healthy, helpful influence which naturally comes from human beings to each other," he said, lately, while speaking of one of his patients. "This woman has drained all which her friends had to give years ago. We need occasionally a fresh moral and mental atmosphere, just as much as fresh material air to breathe."

Another physician, visiting in a country house where the mother (a delicate, affectionate, self-sacrificing woman, who lived but for her husband and children) lay ill with no disease apparently but extreme weakness and weariness, ordered her to go to the city alone to spend a month in absolute idleness, mixing as often as possible with crowds of people who were interested and excited, at church, at concerts, even in public meetings. The patient, a shy, diffident woman, obeyed, and came home with color in her cheeks and new life in her heart.

"I once asked," said a well-known lawyer, "the famous backwoods preacher Bascom what was the secret of his power as an orator; how he contrived to sway large numbers of men to his will. First," he answered, "I bring them close to me and to each other. Leave no empty benches between your audience. The electric spark will not pass across a gap from one man to the other."

These ideas may seem fanciful, but there is a solid basis of truth under them all. Physicians usually bring all their skill to bear in curing the ailments of the body. There is a human magnetism which we are all apt to overlook in our materia medica.

Hard-working women in the lonely farms or isolated villages of this country often find themselves growing irritable and nervous, and even troubled with religious doubts, in spite of their fervent prayers. They do not need tonics or moral discipline. They need friction with unfamiliar minds, new ideas, novel scenes, just as their lungs, after using up all the oxygen in a close room, need the air out of doors.

Young girls are too apt, voluntarily, to force themselves into this state; disappointed in their natural longings for a congenial companion, they resolve to live alone, and shut themselves into their own souls. The resources are not sufficient to keep off famine. "Only a God or a brute can dwell in solitude," says the wise old German.—Youth's Companion.

The accounts of the late Charles S. Demott, receiver of taxes of Hempstead, L. I., who died recently, are said to reveal a shortage of $5,000 to $7,000. It is now known that Demott's defalcation amounts to $4,378, and it is said that a large sum devised by Demott's father to his sons has disappeared.

Big Luck.

Wichita Falls (Tex.) Herald, Aug. 8.

It is gratifying to us to note the fact that Messrs. John Cameron and J. Q. Morrison were the lucky owners of one-fifth of ticket No. 48,954 in The Louisiana State Lottery which drew the $25,000 prize in the Drawing of July 14. This forever does away with the reasoning of those crying fraud, because these gentlemen are too well known to admit of a single thought for a moment that they would lend themselves as parties to deceive the public. The fact is, they held the ticket and it has been promptly cashed and our good friends wear broad smiles because of their good luck. In the face of indisputable facts some will still doubt that which has been demonstrated beyond a doubt to any reasonable mind. Talk with these gentlemen and you will then know that The Louisiana State Lottery cashes its drawings and that persons do not have to stand in with them to be lucky. We rejoice with our good friends and hope that they may again hold the winning number.

The Best Butter Color.

The great unanimity with which dairymen of high reputation have adopted, in preference to anything else, the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co. of Burlington, Vt., is remarkable. It shows that the claims of imitative colorers are baseless, wise dairymen will use no other.

Frightful Case of a Colored Man. I contracted a fearful case of blood poison in 1893. I was treated by some of the best doctors in Atlanta. They used the old remedies of Mercury and Potash, which brought on rheumatism and impaired my digestive organs. I was put in new castles and full of pain. When I was given up to die, my physicians thought that it would be a good idea to test the virtues of Scott's Emulsion. When I commenced taking it, I continued for several months. It took no time, and commenced to improve from the very first. Soon the rheumatism left me, my appetite became all right, and the fever, which had been for some time the most frightful I had ever seen, began to heat, and by the first of October, I was a well man again. I am stronger now than I ever was before, and weigh more. S. S. S. has saved me from an early grave. LEM McLENDON. Lem McLendon has been in the employ of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for some time, and knows the above statement to be true. At the time he began taking Scott's Emulsion he was in a horrible condition. I report his cure almost in my own words. W. B.
