

A WICKED PLACE.

The Metropolis Seemed Full of Perils to an Innocent Granger.

He boarded the car at Twenty-third street, says the New York Tribune. There was nothing out of the way about his appearance. A broad-brimmed straw hat was worn on the back of his head; he had a good-natured face with a rather fleshy nose, large at the base; he wore a light suit of clothes and carried a bamboo switch; his first question told the story.

"Which is your destination," was the conundrum that he fired at the conductor, "the Astor House or the city hall."

"Both," was the sententious and comprehensive reply of that official. This stumped him so that he didn't revive until the Bowery was reached. Then leaning over and whacking a fellow-passenger across the shins in a playful manner with his stick, he asked:

"Where's the Five Point's?"
"Bout a mile further down," was the reply.

The next inquiry was directed in a general way to the whole car. "What are the police up to nowadays? I aint seen 'em make no arrests yet."

"As there are 1,000 officers on duty at one time, it doesn't take more than one arrest to every tenth man to keep up the necessary supply for the courts," suggested a gentleman sitting opposite.

"How many officers are they in all?"
"Three thousand," was the laconic answer.

"Gosh!" exclaimed the seeker after knowledge, as his wonder evaporated in a long whistle.

"I wouldn't like to walk around here after dark," was the next remark, as he gazed fearfully up and down the centre of the street, after a benevolent old gentleman had shown him the glimpse of Five Points to be obtained as the car crosses Worth street.

"Oh, this is a perfectly safe and entirely respectable locality," expostulated the old gentleman.

"Will, down South we reckon Five Points to be a pretty tough place," was the knowing response. "Ye see we read all about these places."

After that he was permitted to revel in the imaginary terrors of his wanderings through this desperately wicked city, and when last seen he was picking his way across Broadway to the Astor house with one hand on his watch, and the other on his purse, and both eyes open for the dreaded pick-pocket and bunko man.

Creating a Sensation in Church.

Considerable commotion was caused in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, in Evona, N. J., recently by Josiah W. Alcott, of Philadelphia, who arose in the course of the service and informed the congregation that Miss Dashiell, the organist, was his wife, and the daughter of the Rev. Dr. Taylor, rector of the church. Mr. Alcott's story is as follows: In 1879 Miss Nellie D. Taylor, of Camden, N. J., eloped with him one night and they were married in Philadelphia against her father's wishes. After they had been married Dr. Taylor forgave them and furnished them with a home in Camden, where they lived for one year. After the birth of her daughter his wife was not well, and her father knowing that Alcott could not afford to send her away to obtain the needed rest, sent her at his own expense to Niagara Falls. This, he says, was a trick of Dr. Taylor's to separate him from his wife. Alcott says that he followed his wife to Canada and thence to this city, to Ocean Grove, N. J., and to Plainfield. He says that she changed her name to Dashiell while she was in New York to prevent him from finding her. Recently he went to Plainfield, and succeeded in finding where Miss Dashiell boarded. He did not inform her of his arrival, but secured a lawyer from Philadelphia, and the next day called on her for the purpose of securing a reconciliation. Mr. Alcott remained in the carriage while the lawyer went to the door, and as soon as the woman learned his business, she refused to have anything to do with him, and left the room.

Alcott went to church on Sunday morning, thinking that his wife was influenced by her father and would relent if he could see her face to face. A number of persons had been informed of his intention and the church was filled. The matter caused much talk among the members of the congregation who generally sympathized with the rector and his daughter. Their friends assert that after Dr. Taylor had furnished Alcott and his wife with a home, Alcott failed to support his wife, and that Dr. Taylor was compelled to take her away from him to save her life. Dr. Taylor owns a great deal of property in Camden, and is held in high esteem in Plainfield.

Alcott says that he is after his wife and child. He says that he was offered $500 to allow her to obtain a divorce.

Mrs. Dashiell, or Mrs. Alcott, says that Mr. Alcott can get redress in court if he is wronged, but that he is afraid to submit the matter to a jury. In reply Mr. Alcott says that he cannot afford to hire a lawyer and stand the expense of a suit.

"How's Your Liver?"

In the comic opera of "Mikado" his imperial highness says:

"To make, to some extent,
Each evil liver
A running river
Of harmless merriment."

A nobler task than making evil livers, rivers of harmless merriment no person king or layman, could take upon himself. The liver among the ancients was considered the source of all a man's evil impulses, and the chances are ten to one to-day that if one's liver is in an ugly condition of discontent, someone's head will be mashed before night!

"How's your liver?" is right to the inquiry: Are you a bear or an angel to-day?

Nine-tenths of the "pure-cussedness," the actions for divorce, the curtain lectures, the family rows, not to speak of murders, crimes and other calamities are prompted by the irritating effect of the inactivity of the liver upon the brain. Fothergill, the great specialist, says this and he knows. He also knows that to prevent such catastrophes nothing equals Warner's safe cure renowned throughout the world, as a maker of

"Each evil liver
A running river
Of harmless merriment."

A Century's Growth in Civilization.

A recent work entitled "Old Times," by John Ashton, is a mirror of England, and in especial of its metropolis, at the time of the French Revolution, and is calculated to give rise to abundant reflections on a century's growth in civilization. The open traffic in government offices by advertisement in the public prints is one of the most striking signs of corruption then existing in the civil service, while the gift to minors of offices in the army and the sale of commissions mark the scandalous condition of the British bulwark. "The Duke of York," says the Times of March 20, 1795, "has ordered circular letters to be sent round to the colonels of regiments, desiring a return to be immediately made to his office of the number of captains in each regiment under twelve years of age, and of lieutenant-colonels under the age of eighteen!" Shocking, too, are the stories of kidnapping and crimping for recruits. A few weeks before, the same paper had to tell of riots growing out of a sergeant's having "two women of the town genteelly dressed up for the purpose of inveigling young men into the house, where they styled their lodgings, where the deluded were instantly handcuffed, and about three or four o'clock in the morning, sent off in coaches, hired for the purpose, to the country." Similar atrocities on the behalf of the navy made life and personal liberty insecure to all found abroad by the press-gang. Sailors were made so scarce by being taken from incoming and outgoing ships, often by riotous boarding, that on January 7, 1794, "upward of sixty sail of merchant ships, bound to the West Indies and other places," were detained in the Thames. At Bow street, a year later, a master bricklayer "brought his apprentice before the sitting magistrate on a charge of having stolen a scaffolding board, value under ninepence; he had his choice, either to enlist as a soldier or to be sent on board the fleet, to both of which he objected. The magistrate then ordered a letter to be written to the Regulating Captain, Tower Hill, to have him sent on board the navy." At this time, Mr. Pitt's plan of manning the navy was to have the magistrates "take cognizance of all idle and disorderly people, who have no visible means of livelihood."

The ninth annual reunion of the Army of West Virginia was held at Portsmouth, Ohio, in a large tent, accommodating 10,000 persons. Gen. Cook, the president, being unavoidably absent, ex-President Hayes, vice president, acted as president. He said: "The Army of West Virginia had but little written history compared with many other societies. Its services were mainly in remote and mountainous country, where the newspaper correspondents didn't penetrate, but nevertheless the service performed was not to be underrated. The guarding of a long time on the frontier and line of railroad supplies, was no menial task. Nearly all the troops from Ohio and Indiana saw their first service in West Virginia. In fact, it would seem as though it was a great military training school for those who accomplished so much at a later period."

Power of the United States.

Hon. James N. Kerns, United States Marshal of Pennsylvania, writes that during the severe winter weather his family used Red Star Cough Cure and were much benefited by it. He states that he knows nothing better in relieving colds or sore throats.

The owners of the Puritan, which beat the British yacht Genesta, will sell her at auction. It looks very much as if the owners were hampered by the expense to which they have been placed in defending the cup and wished to realize the market value of their vessel, and recoup themselves as speedily as possible. They have put her out of commission and she will never again be sailed in a race by her present owners. She will not take part in the race for the commodore's cup lest she should be beaten and her market value diminished. She probably cost about $25,000 and the expenses of the race have added about $10,000 to that sum.

Will Grant be Reinterred?

Ex-Senator Chaffee is quoted as saying to a reporter: New York is a commercial city, and looks at everything at a commercial standpoint. Her citizens will never contribute a million dollars to the Grant monument. If the money is to be raised, New York people must contribute it. No aid need be expected from other states, and yet let his remains be removed to Washington and the money could be raised inside of thirty days. I think the idea of a change will be successfully carried out. When congress meets steps will be taken to obtain Mrs. Grant's consent to the removal. I believe that will not be hard to get.

But what of the general's message to Col. Fred, indicating a preference to New York as the city that has befriended him in the time of his need?

"All right, I don't believe he ever wrote such a message. He never even so much as mentioned New York. His preferences were West Point, Washington or Galena. The soldiers' home will eventually be the resting place for Gen. Grant's remains."

The Montana grand lodge of Masons has just received a set of jewels costing $140.

"He who is false to present duty," says Henry Ward Beecher, "breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause." A case in point occurs to us. Mr. Wm. Ryder, of 87 Jefferson street, Buffalo, N. Y., recently told a reporter that "I had a large abscess on each leg, that kept continually discharging for twenty years. Nothing did me any good except Dr. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery.' It cured me." Here is a volume expressed in a few words. Mr. Ryder's experience is entitled to our readers' careful consideration.—The Sun.

FOR COUGHS, CROUP AND CONSUMPTION USE TAYLOR'S "CHEROKEE" REMEDY

OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN.

The sweet gum, as gathered from a tree of the same name, growing along the small streams in the Southern States, contains a stimulating expectorant principle that loosens the phlegm producing the early morning cough, and stimulates the child to throw off the false membrane in croup and whooping-cough. When combined with the healing mucilaginous principle in the mullein plant of the old fields, presents in TAYLOR'S "CHEROKEE" REMEDY OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN the best known remedy for Coughs, Croup, Whooping-cough and Consumption; and so palatable, any child is pleased to take it. INDIGESTION CURED.

I suffered for more than five years with indigestion, scarcely able to retain the simplest food on my stomach. The burning sensation was almost intolerable, and my whole system was drained. I was wakeful and could not sleep, and consequently more or less nervous all the time. I declined in flesh, and suffered all the usual depression attendant upon this terrible disease. In a word, I was miserable. At last, failing to find relief in anything else, I commenced the use of Swift's Specific. I began to improve at once. The medicine toned up the stomach, strengthened the digestive organs, and soon all that burning ceased, and I could retain food without difficulty. Now my health is good, and can eat anything in the shape of food, and digest it without the slightest difficulty. I most cordially bear this testimony, because there are hundreds suffering as I was, and I am sure they can be as readily healed. Take the prescribed dose after eating, instead of before.
