Commercial Travelers.

The tact which makes a man a good commercial traveler is a peculiar gift, and one may be a good buyer or a successful salesman, and yet fail "on the road." Some merchants think that unless a young man is a born traveller, no amount of drilling will make him a successful "drummer."

George Moore, the philanthropic London merchant, was a complete tailure as a clerk in a wholesale house, but nature fitted him for a commercial traveler, and when his employer sent him out on "the road," he showed such genius in securing customers that his employer wrote, "I am proud of you."

A "traveler" must have tact and a knowledge of human nature, as well as industry. If he cannot read men at a glance, and has not the instinct to adapt himself to their motives and capacities, he had better take himself off the road.

Moore called upon a dealer in silks a dozen times, before receiving one order from him. The man was always "full," and wanted nothing. Moore learned that the silk mercer was very fond of a certain choice snuff-rappee, with a touch of beggar's brown in it.

"I'll get you," said George to himself, and when next in London he bought a handsome snuff-box, and had it filled with the tinted rappee. Within a few weeks, he dropped in upon the silk mercer, and was greeted with his usual salutation, "Quite full, quite

"All right, sir," answered George; "I scarcely expected an order, but I cailed upon you for a reference.

"Certainly, sir, by all means," answered the mercer, feeling a little complimented.

In the course of the conversation George took out his snuff-box, and. taking a pinch, returned it to his pocket. After a short interval he took it out again, saying, as he took another pinch, "I suppose you are not guilty of this bad habit?" "Sometimes," answered the mercer.

George handed him the box.
"Well, that's very fine!" said the Nellie Grant's Unhappiness.

The American papers state, I see, that Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris is talking of returning to the United all a pure, prompt and safe cure for throat and lung diseases. States to reside. I hardly think that she has found England a pleasant dwelling-place. Her first impressions were formed when she visited Europe as the daughter of the President of the United States, and she was, in consequence, caressed and feted wherever she went. On her return as Mrs. Algernon Sartoris she found things by no means as brilliant and agreeable. She had been wild to return to London, where she had been so superbly entertained, but London to Mrs. Sartoris was not what it had been to Nellie Grant. In the first place her father was no longer the President of the United States and our "Republican Princess" as she used to be called, was princess no longer, nor was she welcomed and worshipped as such. Secondly, she had a mother-in-law-a lady who was born a Kemble, a fact that implies much. It is true that the elder Mrs. Sartoris did not survive her son's marriage many years, but after her death her inconsolable widower retired to strict seclusion on his country estates, taking with hin his son and daughter-in-law and their children. Such an existence can hardly have been very exhilarating or enjoyable to an American girl, and especially to one whose girlhood had been passed at the White House as the leading young lady of American society.

A college of music is about to be built in Paris. It will comprise a free school of music, a theatre capable of holding two thousand persons, concert and lecture halls, a dancing school, an exhibition of painting, sculpture, and architecture, a free school of painting on china, an artists' club in which gambling will be strictly prohibited, an immense tencing hall, billiard rooms, conservatory, shootinggallery, library and reading rooms, and finally a wing containing forty small suits of apart-ments, which will be reserved for the foreign members of the club.

That success inspires envy and dishonest competition is well known. The force of this must often have occurred to a Baltimore house which is known everywhere. We refer to The Charles A. Vogeler Company, the excellence of whose goods, the magnitude of whose enterprise and the integrity of whose business dealings are recognized throughout the commercial world. Time and again have they been connelled Time and again have they been compelled to defend their rights against those who sought to wrest from them the legitimate fruits of their labor and enterprise. Last "Well, that's very fine!" said the man, snuffing with zest.

"Let me present you with the box," said Moore. The mercer accepted it St. Jacobs Oil. Thanks to the English law, the High Court of Justice promptly a perpetual injunction against defendant and imposed heavy damages. This decis-ion was really an indorsment of the action of American Courts, for some years ago the United States Court at Cleveland, Ohio, These anecdotes are instructive as well as amusing. They illustrate the awarded the Baltimore house $11,000 damawarded the Baltimore house $11,000 damages. The Charles A. Vogeler Company has again been called upon to defend its rights and has recently instituted suit in the circuit court of Baltimore City for injunction and damages. Contagious!

I am a native of England, and while I was in that country I contracted a terrible thood poison, and for two years was under treatment as an out-door patient at Nottingham Hospital, England, but was not cired, I suffered the most agonizing pains in my bones, and was covered with sores all over my body and limbs, Finally I completely lost all hope in that country, and salled for America, and was treated at Roosevelt in this city, as well as by a prominent physician in New York having no connection with the hospitals.

I saw the advertisement of Swift's Specific, and I determined to give it a trial. I took six bottle-and I can say with great joy that they have cared me entirely. I am as sound and well as I ever was in my life.
