C. C. Robison writes COURIER, from
Ann Arbor, Mich., and says:

"I look in your paper every week for an item on the weather there, so that I can keep posted on it; but I guess you are getting too cold weather, to want to mention it. Have good sleighing here now, and not very cold, though the thermometer gets down below, occasionally."

We assure Mr. Robison that the weather is all that could be desired—
clear, sunshiny, but moderately cold.
Farmers from twenty miles away are in

Hen Grand Dads.

Ben. McCormick growled for a week because the hand grenades, for which he was agent, did not arrive. One day Charley Allen remarked, "say, Ben, do you know any firm by the name of Mc-Cormick, Griggs & Co., 'round here?
There is a case of hen grand dads in the office waiting for 'em."

"What in the world are hen grand
dads?"

"I don't know. Some kind of a patent egg hatcher, I guess. Here is the package."

Great Scott! man, that's for me. Let me read it for you: 'McCormick, Griggs County, Cooperstown, D. T.
Hayward Hand Grenades.'

"Well, I'll be hanged!"
