which are doing so much for the devel-opment of our great territory. Our policy is to secure as low a rate on ex-port goods, such as grain and potatoes as possible, and to accomplish the same end in the matter of the import of such of the necessities, as building material, ect., as may be consistant with the earning capacity of our railroads without crippling them. The mere fact that a railroad with our territory, by the ex-ercise of economy, and by virtue of good management, has accumulated a surplus which may be used for the de-velopment of new territory tributary to it, is no reason why we should require
