THE UMPIRE OF THE NINE.

An umpire of the league nines, Lay dying at the plate, And the gory rocks about him Told the story of his fate.

He had made a rank decision, And the crowd, in frenzy deep. Had shuffled off his mortal coil By rocking him to sleep.

As his life blood ebbed away, And swung his but with vigor To keep the crowd at bay.

The dying umpire beckened, And the captain of the nine Bent over him an sorrow,

For he fear, i another fine. But the umpire's words came feebly As the crisis was at hand, His dimmed eyes were soon to open In a brighter, fairer land.

Then he whispered, low and sadly Let it end on even innings. So the last run do not mark.

"I have finished watching bases: am numbered with the slain, And the cry of 'rats' will never

"Place my hand upon the home plate; Let me have my little mash; Frame a set of resolutions; This is all I have to ask."

The dying umpire faltered His face turned toward the sun. gasp, and all was over; It was his last home run.

They buried him at twilight In a hole they quickly made,

And no stone marks the lonely spot

Where the weary unpire's laid. -Detroit Free Press.

MARIAR.

On a fence by my dwelling a little tom cat Sang "Maria, Mariar, Mariar," And I said to him, "Thomas II., why do you that, Singing 'Riar, Mariar, Mariar?"

Singing 'Riar', Mariar', Mariar', Bit just feline nature, Thomas'' I cried, "Or are you all hungry and vacant inside?" With a switch of his body, the Thoma; replied, "Mariar, Mariar, Mariar."

He howled and he whined in a desolate way,
"Mariar, Mariar, Mariar,"

And all he appeared to be able to say
Was "Riar, Mariar,"
He howled and he walled this singular cry,
With a sob in his throat and a tear in his eye,
And I started to see if a bootjack was nigh
"Mariar, Mariar, Mariar, Mariar,"

And that was the last time the Thomas cat cried, "Mariar, Mariar, Mariar,"

For he dropped from the fence to the ground, where he died.

where he died. Singing "Rlay, Mariay, Mariar;" I picked up a bootjack of seven pounts weight,

I aimed at his head and I threw very streight,

And all that he said, though its strange to relate,
Was "Flar, Mariar, Mariar,"
