THE ELECTION.

The election passed off quietly at Cooperstown. Dr. Newell's vote was challenged by Charles Miller on the ground that the doctor was too old to vote. The judges (after the doctor had explained that he had voted before the lieutenant was born), frowned upon that gentleman, and permitted the chairman of our democratic committee to cast his ballot, amid great applause. E. W. Blackwell was not challenged. although the judges, at first glance, took him for a minor. Ed. had shaved off his mus tache. Beecher Cox was promptly challenged on the ground that he had bet on the election. The judges, how ever, did not mind a little thing like that |93. and permitted the young Labradorian to exercise the privileges of an American citizen. The Cooperstown precinct was very free of intoxicants, so that everything was harmonious. The genial R C. Cooper put in an appearance about noon and gave the boys a few peinters, while Knud Thompson's contagious laugh lightened up the gloom every five minutes. Cash Yancy cast the first ballot, and was glad to get off without a challenge, as he was afraid he had lost a V on the election, anyhow. Following is the result:
