SLUMBER SONG.
Run, little brooks, from the uplands brown, Run, run to the sea!
Fly, little birds, when the sun goes down,
Back to the greenwood tree!
Beat, little waves, on the rocky shore, Sing on the pebbly beach!
And teach us the sweet truths o'er and o'er That you always used to teach.
Crowd, little birds, 'neath mother's wings,
The night is dark and cold; Hilite, white moon, from all earthly things,
The month is growing old.
Nestle closer, oh, baby head,
To the tender, snow white breast!
Soundly sleep on thy downy bed, Sleep, sleep and rest.
For the years come and the years go, Hearts of youth grow cold;
The rosen bloom, but soon the snow,
The world grows old. —E. Allen Klaney.

DANGEROUS PLACES IN PARIS.
The Cellars Where Thieves and Murderers Resort.
So we made up a party of three, and between 1 and 2 in the morning we arrived at the Central markets. We left them to their dreams, and descended by a narrow staircase into a series of vaults, the whitewashed ceilings of which were covered with arabesques and names written in black with the smoke of a candle.
In one part of these vaults a group of men were drinking and singing parodies of church hymns. This did not come up to our expectations, so we went to "La Jeune France," a famous cellar, where a man had been assassinated only a few nights before. We passed through a gate, down one flight of narrow stairs, then stooping low, we passed under a narrow archway reserved in the foundations of the house, then down another flight of stairs, then through another archway, along a tortuous passage, and so to a tunnel about seven feet high, five feet broad, and twenty feet long. The vault of the roof was covered with green trelliswork; there were benches and rush stools to sit upon; wooden tables bearing the marks of strife; and, to light us, two gas jets. We were here at the very end of the mouse trap, and we now understood why the police never enter these "caveaux"—there is no possibility of a fair fight.
When we entered the "caveau" there was nobody there, but after we had ordered some wine two musicians came in. The one was a miserably pale fellow, half starved and half blind, with a thin blonde mustache. He sang and accompanied himself by striking a few chords on a guitar. The other was a short, bony man, with a black beard, drunken blue eyes, round shoulders and an appearance of humility, as if he were constantly afraid of receiving kicks. He sang in turn, strumming on a single bass chord! The tip given by some watcher soon brought four other visitors—a burly ruffian, who wore a huge red fez rising eighteen inches above his crown; a young man wearing a thin cotton blouse and two others dressed in cast off clothes of fashionable cut, but without a vestige of linen. The humble musician sang, above all things, an air from "Mignon," keeping his eyes fixed on the ground as he sang and pointing to his heart with an awkward gesture whenever the word "heart" occurred in the romance. Suddenly, one after another, half a dozen athletic, square shouldered men, varying in age from 17 to 25, crept through the narrow archway, passed rapidly in without even glancing at our table and massed themselves at the end of the vault, lolling on the benches, smoking cigarettes and drinking at our expense, for we thought it only polite to offer these gentlemen a glass of wine, the more so as the musicians were playing for our amusement.
After "Mignon" the ruffian with the red fez asked for the guitar, took a tuning fork out of his pocket, snapped it with his teeth, and tuned the instrument properly.
Then the ruffian in the cotton blouse rose and with fine voice, perfect sentiment, and correct gesture, sang other airs from "Mignon" and also from "Carmen." All the ruffians listened in perfect silence to the singer, who was a real artist, and two women who had joined the band melted into tears at the end, one of them exclaiming: "Ah, music! When I hear 'Mignon' I can't help it. I cry like a calf." The scene appeared to be idyllic rather than brigandish and terrible. However, it appeared after after all that we might have been in better company, for at a sign from the waiter I slipped out of the vault.
"You had better give the word to your friends to come up stairs. The band is almost as complete, and it is the very band that assassinated a man here last week.
If their chief happens to come in you might get in trouble." We did not wait to be warned twice, but wished the gentlemen good evening, and ascended the staircase without undue precipitation, and yet with a kind of internal sensation of rapidity.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.
